Forty-three new members were welcomed into the Appomattox Camp, Woodmen of the World, at a dinner Saturday evening. Shown at the head table and facing the camera, are Mrs. Bobby Phelps, Bobby Phelps, local Camp, WOW District manager.

Woodmen Of World Hold Dinner

Woodmen of the World, fraternalism, Protection, Fraternity, Fernal insurance organization in the service, in terms of the organization for nearly a generation to seek out active persons with high ideals and fifteen years, regained 'active status' Saturday evening when nearly eighty persons overflowed the dining area of the Parkway Motel Restaurant for the Paul A. Smith, state manager for Southwest Virginia, to discuss on aims and purposes of the organization.

Toastmaster was Bobby W. Phelps, sovereign of the Appomattox camp. Smith was introduced by Earl Clapp, W.O. W. district manager.

Smith said that Phelps is doing an outstanding job in reactivating the Woodmen's work locally. He explained the three parts of the Woodmen

The Woodmen of the World, Smith said, make an honest effort to instill a feeling of patriotism throughout America. Fifty thousand American flags have been given by W.O.W. to schools and other groups, he said.

Membership now totals 117, Phelps told the group. Of these, forty-three are new members, he said. Pins were distributed. Two ladies won doorprizes: Mrs. J. Peyton Harvey and Mrs. Roy O. Moon.

District Manager Earl Clapp introduced the following as "special guests": Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Blanks, Mr. and Mrs. B. K. Martin, Gladstone, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Goin, Lynchburg, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Martin, Gladstone, Mr. and Mrs. James Nash, Lynchburg, Reverend and Mrs. M. G. Stimpson, Appomattox and the main speaker and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Smith.

Thirty-One Students Complete Red Cross Home Nursing Course

Second year Home Economics students at Appomattox High School have received training in Red Cross Home Nursing under the direction of their home economics teacher, Mrs. Madeline Thomas, and Mrs. Betty Jean Jones.

This course required 14 hours of class work to meet the requirements of Red Cross Nursing and to be eligible for a certificate in home nursing. The students spent their time learning things a home nurse should know. Nearly every family at sometime faces the problem of caring for some one who is sick or injured. Today the help of family members has a new meaning in view of the many demands on doctors and nurses. It is important for teenagers as well as adults to learn the skills and acquire the knowledge that will enable them to care for the sick at home.

Some of the more outstanding things brought out in the home nursing class were the foods and nutrition a sick person should have. The girls planned and prepared meals for liquid, soft, light and full diets. They also learned in this process how to care for the eating utensils of the patient and tips on feeding the patient.

This class learned that cuts and burns are probably the most common injuries that the home nurse is faced with. They range from minor wounds to ones of great severity. Certain care and attention should be given to all wounds as healing is promoted and infection prevented as the students found out as the course progressed.

Red Cross Gifts "Generous" Says Fund Chairman

Mrs. C. T. Moses, collecting in downtown Appomattox for the Red Cross Fund drive, says that businessmen have been "very generous" in their donations. Donations have ranged from $1.00 to $75.00 she says in a total of $368 from this one section of the county.

The 4-H Honor Club, making a house-to-house canvass under leadership of Joe Terry, Jr., club president, and Residential Collection chairman, Mrs. Ben Marshall, have collected $126.86 thus far in Appomattox.

Reverend R. Q. Lawing reports $15.55 from Canaan Baptist Church, $5.00 from Mormon Star Baptist Church, and $6.00 from Springfield Baptist Church.

Harry Jenkins has turned in $10.00 from Hollywood Church, and Trinity Methodist, $18.50.

Fund Chairman, Rev. M. G. Simpson, is asking that everyone exhibit this same "generous spirit" so that Red Cross goals here in the county and throughout the nation may be met. He says that $400.00 is needed to finance the regular visits of the Bloodmobile, and it is hoped that the Home Secretary, Mrs. Don Moses, can once again be put on a salary with sufficient funds to aid local people asking her help.

The Community Sunrise Service will be held in Appomattox at Memorial Methodist Church Sunday at 6:30 a.m. The minister, Reverend F. S. Wagoner, will preside, with Reverend O. D. Moore of Liberty Baptist Church bringing the message, "Resurrection and Living."

Reverend Jack Adams will read Scripture; Reverend Vergil L. Hudson will lead in prayer, with Reverend M. G. Stimpson pronouncing the benediction. The Appomattox Civic Chorus will sing "God So Love the World" by John Stainer.

"God Speaks Through Children" Says Minister Panelist At P-TA

Discipline methods used at Appomattox Elementary School were recommendations for the whole some family life were included in the three member panel discussion on "Discipline" Tuesday evening at the Appomattox Elementary School P-TA meeting.

John Biddle, visiting teacher of the Lynchburg School system; Mrs. Julian Hesson, seventh grade teacher at AES, and Dr. Arthur H. Brown, pastor of the Appomattox Baptist Church, Lynchburg, comprised the panel.

Mrs. Hesson said, "The best solution to discipline problems is prevention." She explained that almost all discipline problems are settled by individual teachers at Appomattox Elementary School. "We take only the worst offenders to the office."

At Appomattox Elementary, Mrs. Hesson said, "You will observe that students are relaxed but are still aware of authority". She explained that one time-honored means of discipline, "keeping a child in" is not possible locally. There are no "recesses" and "no time to keep the child in," she said.

"The best teacher one remembers," she said, is the one who "makes you proud to be You."

John Biddle, parent of four, that in his own home it must use four different kinds of discipline." But the same principles also have to vary their disciplinary methods to suit each child's personality. "Don't be concern", Biddle said. "Normal children are healthy, active and spontaneous," he added, and "children will 'push' you as far as you will go."

Biddle said that "emotional problems are intimately concerned with achievement. There is not enough teacher-parent communication." We need to present our children with "basic physical, mental, and spiritual take necessary steps to build a new school at Appomattox. A building committee composed of T. J. Stratton, T. A. Smith and J. F. Dickenson with power to advertise for plan and specifications at a cost not to exceed $700 appointed. Instead of costing $700, it cost $800. The building was to be ready for use by October 1, 1895. Mr. J. B. Leving was chosen principal of West Appomattox. Later Mr. J. G. Fisher was appointed substitute for Mr. Leving.

Progressive Minister Sparked Interest In Local High School

Ordinarily the school time was five months. If parents wished their children to attend longer, private school was held for a month or so, for which the parents paid. But the high school was extended for two months upon the condition that the patrons operate it an additional month. There were four teachers in Appomattox High School in 1907. By 1908 the school term had been increased to six months and the High School to eight. Finally, by 1908 sufficient interest in building a larger school had developed for the board to take steps in that direction. Nine and one-half acres of land costing $1500, was bought and plans for the beginning of the present high school were initiated. "The Legislature of Virginia appropriated funds to help the Congressional Districts establish agricultural schools in each Congressional District. H. D. Flood, S. L. Ferguson and R. Burke immediately turned their energies to have the one for this district located here.' Contributions were made to found aid and stimulus to their work. The more experienced became impressed with the dignity, importance and responsibility of their avocation. None but madmen and fools could ever aim to suppress such a beneficial institution as adjunct to our admirable system of education."

Gradually Capt. Chilton leased the number of meetings, until an annual institute was held that necessity seem to him to require. Even then steps to require teachers to attend this had to be taken. As the years passed a committee made up of the superintendent and teachers planned the Institute.

The board was foresighted enough to recognize the value to the time. Virginia School Journal, so in 1907 it was sent to each teacher for six months at the board's expense. The board did this on other occasion also. "It was agreed to try to induce all the teachers who could do so to attend the Teachers' Meeting in Roanoke, October 5, 1907, and to receive their usual pay during the time lost from school."

Many teachers, maybe all, had to go to the Court House each year to take examinations for two days. Those examinations were far different from those we attended the State Normals (Summer School).

The early schools were heated by fireplaces if heated at all. The "big boys', and there must have been big boys in every school since the board allowed people up to 25 years of age to attend without paying tuition. As schools grew and rooms were added in 1955. A new elementary school was built on another campus, making more space available for the high school pupils.

Now (1963) the school draws pupils from the five feeder schools of the county. With an enrollment of more than 590 the school is equipped to offer courses in agriculture, home economics, business, foreign languages, math, English, social subjects and physical education. With a library of more than 5,000 volumes, audio - visual equipment and a growing guidance program, the school has a bright future.

From time to time salaries were discussed. In 1872 the county Board adopted a salary schedule:

A teacher holding a full certificate to receive $35 per month.

A teacher holding an Intermediate certificate to receive $25 per month.

A teacher holding a Primary certificate to receive $20 per month.

Teachers who had no certificate received less than $20. Mr. Chilton, as have other county superintendent, made a strong effort to help the teachers improve their professional preparation. "At the beginning of the school system in our county our efficient County Superintendent, Capt. C. H. Chilton, organized a County Teachers' Institute, which met under a constitution and by-laws adopted by the society for instruction in pedagogics regularly every month. The presiding officer at each meeting was a wide and inviting field Captain Chilton did a good work in this direction.

Textbooks were regularly studied to recite in these teachers meetings in connection with recitations on theory and practice of teaching. Young teachers found aid and stimulus to their work. The more experienced became impressed with the dignity, importance and responsibility of their avocation. None but madmen and fools could ever aim to suppress such a beneficial institution as adjunct to our admirable system of education."

Gradually Capt. Chilton lessened the number of meetings, until an annual institute was held that necessity seem to him to require. Even then steps to require teachers to attend this had to be taken. As the years passed a committee made up of the superintendent and teachers planned the Institute.

The board was foresighted enough to recognize the value to the time. Virginia School Journal, so in 1907 it was sent to each teacher for six months at the board's expense. The board did this on other occasion also. "It was agreed to try to induce all the teachers who could do so to attend the Teachers' Meeting in Roanoke, October 5, 1907, and to receive their usual pay during the time lost from school."

Many teachers, maybe all, had to go to the Court House each year to take examinations for two days. Those examinations were far different from those we attended the State Normals (Summer School).

The early schools were heated by fireplaces if heated at all. The "big boys', and there must have been big boys in every school since the board allowed people up to 25 years of age to attend without paying tuition. As schools grew and rooms were added in 1955. A new elementary school was built on another campus, making more space available for the high school pupils.

Now (1963) the school draws pupils from the five feeder schools of the county. With an enrollment of more than 590 the school is equipped to offer every school.

Fortunate indeed has the Appomattox system been in the caliber of men who have filled the office of superintendent. The fact that only five men filled this position in almost a century attests to their dedication and excellent accomplishments. In addition to those superintendents already mentioned may be added these:

Mr. J. Kirk Runnah (1889-1912) who served as a board member before becoming superintendent.

Mr. N. R. Featherston (1913-1936) who was the son of the first public school teacher of the county and a teacher himself.

Mr. J. A. Burke (1926-1963) who was a graduate of Appomattox High School as well as a teacher there.

The following statistics will illustrate in a small way the results of Mr. Burke's foresight and leadership:

No. of white schools 1926	1962
One-teacher	16 0
Two-teacher	3 1
Three-teacher	5 1
Four-teacher	2 2
Seven-teacher	0 1
Nineteen-teacher	0 1
High School	2 1
No. of Negro Schools	2 0
One-teacher	13 1
Two-teacher	4 1
Sixteen-teacher	0 1
High School	1 1
Total Value of school property 1926 — $62,000	1962—$1,219,414

In 1962 Mr. Earl J. Smith, Jr. was appointed to succeed Mr. Burke.

No history of a rural school system of by-gone days is complete that does not mention the place of the school as a community center and the teacher as the leader in the community. Appomattox is no exception. Before the school was usually near the center of the community — therefore, in walking distance or later driving distance—it was used for religious meetings, especially for Sunday School for those too far to go to church, the Grange and other farm groups. How many young people have enjoyed the fellowship of each other while planning and executing box parties, pie suppers, sings, oyster suppers and basket socials to make money for the school, but at the same time have a little fun along with it. The teacher's visit in the home was once a "great event" to teacher, pupil and parents. Her visit warded off trouble with Johnny as he grew up without paying tuition. As schools grew and roads improved the whole faculty was invited to supper in a number of the homes. There good food and good fellowship were in such abundance that each person present felt inspired to return to his job and do a better piece of work.

To the unknown teacher belongs much of the credit for the progress of the system.
